This summer I took part in the North Dakota Newspaper Association Internship. As well as sending in photos from the county baseball team I also interviewed many local people and businesses on their response to the Covid-19 Pandemic. I interviewed the four libraries in Nelson County to see how they handled the pandemic and also asked them questions about hours and what they offered to the public. I also asked the local libraries about how the passing of a measure would help their library. I also interviewed members of the Nelson County Courthouse to see the County's response to Covid-19. I interviewed the county auditor, the administrator of the health unit, and the emergency manager and superintendent of schools. I asked the courthouse members on how their jobs changed during the pandemic and what things like the election will look like going forward.

I learned a lot of new things this summer while doing the North Dakota Newspaper Association Internship. I enjoyed working for the paper this summer as well.
